called for a mass of information providing a direct requirement of the tariff law, while in his second amendment there was a provision that the President should make an investigation of such prices for the purpose of making recommendations to Congress. Both were out of order, because they provided for doing things not specifically authorized by law. In his third amendment Mr. Tawney so worded his amendment as to make it apply only to information necessary for the enforcement of the tariff law.

A tariff commission invested with all the powers necessary to investigate thoroughly tariff conditions in this country and abroad, is proposed to be created in a bill introduced in the House to-day by Representative Good, an "insurgent" Republican member from Iowa.

The Good bill suggests a commission of five members to be appointed by the President, with the consent of the Senate, with salaries of $7,500 each. The results of the commission's investigation would be made available for the use of Congress, but would not be made public excepting by direction of the President and Congress. The bill carries an appropriation of $255,000.

Pleasant for Congress.

Chairman Tawney, of the House Committee on Appropriations, plans to have the air in the legislative halls of Congress fresh as the ocean breezes or the stream-cooled atmosphere of a shaded mountain resort. It was decided by him to-day that he would insert in the general deficiency appropriation bill an item of $10,000 to equip the chambers with air conditioning apparatus.

Several years ago the Senate chamber was equipped with an apparatus to refrigerate the air. It was never used, however, because some physician reported that such artificially cooled air would be fatal to men of sixty years or more.

ONLY ONE WAY TO SHAKE IT OFF

Unhappy is the man or woman with a bad back. No rest, no sleep, no peace at all. It begins in the morning, when you get up from bed so lame, sore and stiff that it is hard to bend over to put your shoes on.

All day there is a heavy, dull, throbbing pain in the small of the back, just over the kidneys. It hurts to bend over, to lift anything, or even to get up from a chair. Any sudden, awkward movement sends a sharp, darting twinge through the sore spot.

When night comes the sufferer retires to fitful sleep, can't lie comfortably in any one position, or turn over without a painful effort.

Don't look at backache as merely a muscular pain, that will pass away with rest. There is a deeper trouble. Nine times out of ten it is the kidneys that throb and ache, and there can be no relief until the kidneys are given help.

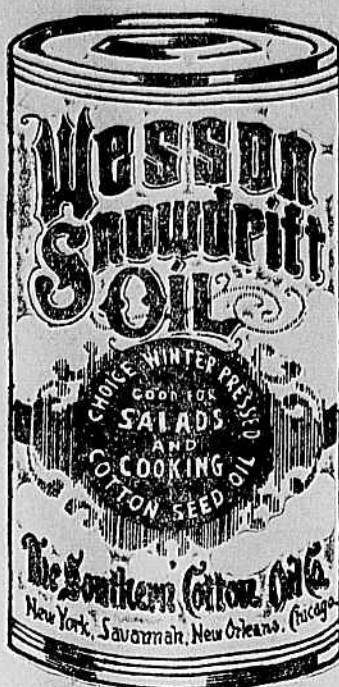

The kidneys have a big work to do. All the blood in the body is coursing through the kidney filters constantly, to be freed of uric poisons. It is a heavy enough task when the kidneys are well, but a cold, chill, fever, or some thoughtless exposure, or overindulgence in liquor, tea, beer or coffee

Backache Will Get Worse and Worse Until the Kidneys Are Cured.

Richmond, and a number of resolutions of thanks were adopted, including a special resolution of thanks to retiring Secretary Joseph L. Levy, who has held that office for the past eleven years.

Caricaturing the Jew.

The most spirited debate of the entire session occurred during the morning over the resolution protesting against stage caricaturing of alleged Jewish peculiarities. There were some who thought the whole subject had been ignored; that the oddities of the Irish and Germans were made the subjects of near-humor, and that the Jew could stand it if the public could. A majority took the other view, that no opportunity should be neglected to put on record a protest against so objectionable a practice, which some of the speakers held, touched the heart-blood of the race.

The discussion was opened by Herman Binder, of Gate City Lodge, At-large, who, quoted from an address of the eloquent Dr. Joseph Silverman, of New York City, and read the reply of a theatrical manager, who stated that he had given instructions that all objectionable and offensive acts were to be cut out. He said he was forced to admit that many of the actors and some of the managers themselves were Jews, yet he insisted that such attempts at fun-making were "sacrifices of human heart-blood" which could not be other than humiliating to a people striving by every proper means to elevate itself. He asked the order of B'Nai B'Rith to sound a protest against such practices that would be heard throughout the world. Rabbi George Solomon thought the body should go on record. Joseph Salabas, of Baltimore, led the opposition, holding that the stage had as much right to burlesque the national foibles of the Jewish race as it did of the Irish, the German, or any people whose traits were distinctive and in every sense American and cosmopolitan.

He thought that the average performer frequently represented idiosyncrasies of speech and of manner, and that a protest would stamp the race as narrow-minded.

Night Boycott Shakespeare.

While much of it might be classed as offensive, he thought theatre managers, regardless of their promises, would put on what paid best, and that after all those Jews who had a liberal sense of humor appreciated the parts, as was shown by the large Jewish patronage of the theatres.

Herbert T. Ezekiel, of Richmond, thought a protest futile. "Our own people," he said, "sometimes give countenance and circulation to some of the most offensive jokes. I take it that we are not going to boycott Shakespeare, and yet it would be hard to find a more unjust portrayal of the Jewish race than his character of Shylock."

Dr. Callisch favored making the protest as emphatic and widespread as possible. Replying to Mr. Ezekiel, he said that the reading of the "Merchant of Venice," in which the character of Shylock appears, had been discontinued in the public schools of Milwaukee and Cleveland because of protests from Jews. By an overwhelming vote the following protest was adopted by the Grand Lodge:

Dues Are Reduced.

On recommendation of the general committee the salary of the secretary was fixed at $300 a year, and the dues to the Orphan's Home were reduced from $2 a year to $1.50. The convention rejected a recommendation that contribution boxes for the home be placed in the synagogues.

The recommendation of President Triest that all dead timber be cut out by dropping lodges which failed to come up to the requirements was approved, and the general committee was instructed to meet at least once a year, besides the convention meeting, at the expense of the convention.

There was a long debate over the recommendation of the committee that the seat of government of the Grand Lodge be moved from Baltimore, and follow the location of the secretary, the report being finally rejected. It was represented that there was now no lodge in Baltimore, and it seemed an anomaly to have the seat of government in a city where there was no lodge. As a matter of fact, all literature has gone out from Richmond for years past, but the seal still carried the name Baltimore. The opponents of any change said that the order held a Maryland charter, that to move the seat of government to Savannah, following the new secretary, might necessitate the legal expense of a new charter, which cost might be repeated every time a new secretary was elected. Under the action of the convention rejecting the report, the Maryland charter is retained, although the actual work will be done by the secretary in Savannah, just as it has heretofore been done by Secretary Levy in Richmond. There was some complaint that some of the committee reports were presented verbally and not in writing, but the chairman pleaded the excess of hospitality on the part of the local committee of entertainment, and the lack of time to draw up the papers.

Quality Versus Quantity.

There was a prolonged discussion over plans for increasing the membership in the order. Dr. Callisch standing for quality and working ability rather than mere numbers in the membership. Rabbi Meyerberg, of Goldsboro, N. C., took the opposite ground, saying the order should welcome into membership the thousands of illiterate Jewish immigrants pouring into this country, and give them the benefits which members of the race living in this country have already received. Dr. Callisch replied that he had not meant to draw a social or financial distinction, but that the order wanted men with warmth and enthusiasm, not merely those who would have their names enrolled and pay their dues. The whole matter of a propaganda for enlarged membership was finally left with the general committee, after a somewhat general debate. The circulation of literature in towns not now represented by lodges was approved, as was the plan of President Triest for offering gold medals to Jewish children for essays on the purpose and work of the Order of B'Nai B'Rith. Among the entertaining features of the closing day were a luncheon to the delegates at the Jefferson Club at the noon recess, and a luncheon tendered the wives of delegates and other women visitors at the Jefferson Hotel at the same hour. Richmond Lodge tendered a bridge whist party in the afternoon to the visiting women at the Jefferson Club, and those delegates who were able to stay over last night were the guests of the Jefferson Club at an informal entertainment.
